

MARRIED WHEN SHE WAS INTOXICATED

Mrs. Myrtle B. Hanfey, Just 21 To-Day, Seeks Annulment of the Ceremony on Ground of Unconsciousness.

WEDDED WITHIN FIVE HOURS

Bride Was Brought Home and Says She Didn't Know She Was Married Until She Saw the Certificate.

On the ground that she was intoxicated and unconscious of which she was doing when she was married to Joseph P. Hanfey, Myrtle B. Hanfey, a handsome and vivacious young woman living at No. 343 West Twenty-second street, who is to-day celebrating her twenty-first birthday, applied to Supreme Court Justice Truax, through ex-Judge Arthur C. Butts, for the annulment of her marriage.

The young woman testified that she was living a couple of doors away from Harry W. Mc Cord's physical culture school in West Fifteenth street, and was a pupil there, when on the evening of Jan. 9, 1902, she was introduced by the professor to young Hanfey.

"Mr. Hanfey invited me and I went out with him at about 8 o'clock," said the young woman. "We visited a restaurant, where I drank two colodras which he ordered. I had never drank any intoxicating liquor before. I have no remembrance of anything after that, but next morning when I awoke in my boarding-house I found a marriage certificate on my dressing bureau."

"She said she went to the minister and the told her he had performed the ceremony about 1:30 o'clock in the morning."

"We never lived together," said Mrs. Hanfey. "and I have not seen him since."

Bride Brought Home Intoxicated. Mrs. Mary E. Clark, with whom the young woman boarded at that time, testified that Myrtle was brought home by two men at 2:30 o'clock in the morning stupefied with drink.

"What did Myrtle drink?" asked ex-Judge Butts. "Cocktails; she drank eight or more. We walked around in the city for an hour or so. Then we went into another saloon and both Joe and Myrtle drank cocktails until 1:30 A. M., and Joe started to tell Myrtle how much she loved her."

"What'll you do to prove it?" she asked. "I'll marry you," said he. Then we started out to find a minister. I had to hold them both up."

They Found a Minister. "We walked around to the paragon adjoining the Metropolitan Temple, Seventh avenue, near Fourteenth street. I rang the bell. After telling him what we wanted the parson came down and he and Joe opened up a bottle of champagne in a saloon, and then he and I took Myrtle home."

"After the wedding Joe opened up a bottle of champagne in a saloon, and then he and I took Myrtle home. The Rev. Robert Bagwell, of the Methodist Metropolitan Temple, testified: "Yes, I married these young people. I did not notice anything wrong about the young woman. She answered the usual questions all right."

"Was she in a condition to be capable of understanding the marriage contract?" asked Justice Truax. "From what transpired afterward—she came to ask if it was true that she was married at my house and was married—I should say not," replied the clergyman. "I performed the ceremony with a great deal of protest of conscience."

Justice Truax reserved decision.
